This program is a standalone workstation which means you don't need to download astroCalc before using it. MyTrantran Description: It is designed to help you discover what influences you currently are under, using the natal chart. The program calculates secondary or tertiary progressions plus transits and solar arcs, then informs you of the information. The charts are also stored in a Report folder for you to view, edit and print according to your preference. It is also a standalone workstation which means you don't need to download astroCalc before using it. Metastable Lunar Eclipse Predictions From New Moon to Solar Eclipse, AstroCalc provides you with information on what the next lunar eclipse will be, when it will occur, what astrological houses it will be happening in and some of the key words that will be indicating an event for that time of eclipse. All of this information can be recorded into AstroCalc, or can be used as an aide in writing out a chart with Natal, Secondary, Tertiary Progressions, Lunar Transits, Solar Arc and all the other planets. This is all accomplished in an easy to use interface with one of the key features being, you can directly type in the required info in the form of house groupings, or even simply enter the required information and we will do the rest. The program can then automatically move on to the next eclipse, and provides you with the information of the next eclipse with its date, time, signs and houses. AstroCalc is also capable of providing the information of the astrological sign of the New Moon, the full moon and the last eclipse. It also provides you with any secondary or tertiary progressions happening at that time. If you have any questions about how this works or how the program works in general, or if you need help in using the program, please contact me. Getting Started With The AstroCalc Program

Esther Goldman Esther Goldman (August 11, 1918 – May 26, 2012) was an American artist, writer, and book editor. She was a leading woman in the New York art world in the first half of the 20th century. She was known for both her painting and her writing. Early life and education Goldman was born in Yonkers,

New York to Orthodox Jewish parents. Her father Joseph Goldman was a vaudeville dancer and author, and her mother Frieda Rachel was an interior designer. She was the only child in her family, but attended the progressive, feminist-oriented Scarsdale High School. In the summer of 1935, Goldman attended the Yale School of Fine Arts and there met painter Raoul Hausmann who became her mentor. In 1937, Goldman married Hausmann and they lived in New York City. She exhibited her painting in the SoHo neighborhood at the Artists Union, where it was exhibited in the late 1930s. Goldman and Hausmann's daughter, Rebecca Goldman Hausmann, was born the year they lived together in New York. The couple lived for several years in South Korea, where Rebecca was born, and then returned to New York. In 1938, Goldman had her first solo exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. Career Goldman was the art critic for the Museum of Modern Art (MOMA) magazine from 1939 to 1944. In 1945, she co-founded ARTnews magazine with Harold Rosenberg and Barbara Rose. Goldman wrote for the magazine for the rest of her career. From 1945 to 1947, she served as the magazine's art editor. From 1947 to 1955 she was the magazine's book editor and from 1950 to 1951 she also served as book editor of ARTnews. From 1954 to 1959, she served as MOMA's director of publications, then from 1959 to 1967 was its director of planning. In 1947 Goldman met noted sculptor Kees van Dongen, and the two would later have two children, Kees and Christine van Dongen. In 1949, Goldman and Kees Van Dongen founded the Gallery De Hallen in
