Join us in a project named "Targets for Dummies", a Scrutineer open source survey and monitoring tool, born in August 2017 to support the emergency services. The full project goals are given in the below article. Our main initial goal is to provide a tool that allows to find quickly if a specific user has been logged into the system or not. However, we will implement many features for this new project, and these could be really useful for many people. How we are able to do this: We will set it up as a passive tool. We have no control over what users have in their PC, they can install any software, but we have no access to the information they provide to the system. We cannot know what software they have or not installed. That's why we decided to monitor the changes in the user profile, we just check the configuration of the user profile. This monitoring will be done by the Scrutineer daemon. To achieve this we will use the following tools: This is why our initial goal is to monitor changes in the user profile configuration. Users can change its configuration at any time (Windows service). 2) How the configuration changes are gathered? Monitoring the changes in the configuration will be done by the Scrutineer daemon. The daemon will send notifications to the "scrutineer-client" application, which will send them to the "maillog". The following configuration has been chosen to gather the configuration changes of the users: Get the username from the process "C:\Windows\System32\logon.exe" Get the SID from the process "C:\Windows\System32\svchost.exe" Get the user "ID" from the WMI process "C:\Windows\System32\winmgmts:.\\root\\cimv2:Win32_UserAccount.Name='{ {{UserName}} }'" If we have the SID
