Specops Password Policy is a reliable application that can help users increase the level of security regarding their passwords in an efficient manner. Its functions involve enforcing specific password policies so that users can be encouraged to set up stronger passwords. This program can increase password-related security levels, but it also offers high overall flexibility, as it can be used to reduce IT-assistance expenses through self-support. Accessing it requires an Internet-connected device with a supported web browser, thus granting users the possibility of accessing from a wide range of locations. The policies that can be enforced through this application are based on various requirements that are related to complexity parameters. Depending on their organization's profile, users can specify restrictions or set certain rules so that the final result matches a corresponding security level. For instance, this utility can be adjusted so that it can work with traditional password rules or passphrases, depending on the current demand. Rules can be enforced on individual or multiple users alike, providing the administrator with more efficient control. Specops Password Policy features passphrase support that can be used to bypass certain length limitations and set passwords that are generated from a larger number of characters. Also, users can define certain situations when policies need to be enforced. This application comes with an increased overall accessibility, as it provides users with detailed information about the rules they need to follow, instead of displaying vague error messages. Furthermore, it can be set to notify users of their password's expiry date. My review Review from Reviews 3.0 15,358 total 5 6,250 4 2,346 3 896 2 611 1 6,001 Philippe C Difficult to use. Requires 'full installation', which means download and manually installing the ZIP archive, which is quite large (about 7 MB). This requires an internet connection. I could not use it until I found a local network. When you launch the program, it can be used to generate and check passwords. But the GUI is quite difficult to use, the 'editor' is hard to use, and the tool is not very informative. I have to use the default output generator and a text editor. There is a further problem: Specops password policy relies on web services (XML or SOAP) that are not always available (in my case because I use a university network that blocks access to outside services). It means that sometimes the computer
